1. PROBLEM: To create a series of internally controlled CIA honor awards, to supplement the National Security Medal and the Medal of Freedom, for presentation to employees of the Agency and others officially associated with the Agency whose performance warrants such tangible recognition of valuable services.
2. ASSUMPTIONS:
 - a. In furtherance of the U. S. intelligence effort some individuals perform outstanding acts of valor, achievement or service which cannot be appropriately recognized under present CIA procedures.
 - b. The opportunity for outstanding contribution is present at all levels and in all areas.
3. FACTS BEARING ON THE PROBLEM:
 - a. Military and civilian agencies recognize by personal decoration outstanding valor, achievement and service.
 - b. The U. S. Government recognizes valor by awarding decorations of various levels reserved for that purpose only. Each of these decorations takes precedence over a decoration of comparable level awarded for achievement or service.
 - c. The effectiveness of such decorations depends to a large degree upon the standards under which they are awarded, as well as upon the recognition and appreciation accorded them.
 - d. This Agency, in contrast to other elements of the U. S. Government, lacks a system of internally controlled honor awards for presentation to deserving employees and others officially associated with the Agency.
4. DISCUSSION:
 - a. It is proposed that a new National Security Council decoration reserved exclusively for valor, to be known as the National Security Cross, be established and that it be the senior decoration available in the field of intelligence relating to the national security. The present National Security Medal will remain the senior decoration for outstanding achievement or service in the field of intelligence relating to the national security. Three new CIA decorations would take precedence immediately

Medal of Freedom
(a comparatively liberal award)
(used by CIA to recognize acts of merit performed overseas, particularly when a security connotation is present)

Bronze Star Medal

- b. The three CIA medals would be awarded only when the following criteria are met:
- (1) CIA Medal for Valor. The recipient must have distinguished himself by a voluntary act of heroism, or by a series of closely related acts, involving the acceptance of existing dangers with praiseworthy fortitude and exemplary courage.
 - (2) CIA Exceptional Service Medal. The recipient must have distinguished himself by performance of outstanding services or by achievement of a distinctively exceptional nature in a duty of responsibility, the results of which constitute a major contribution to the missions of the Central Intelligence Agency.
 - (3) CIA Meritorious Service Medal (with Device for Valor). The recipient must have distinguished himself by the voluntary acceptance of existing dangers with praiseworthy fortitude and exemplary courage.
 - (4) CIA Meritorious Service Medal. The recipient must have distinguished himself by performance of meritorious services or by achievement, in addition to the duties normally expected of him, requiring initiative and extra effort which have contributed to the accomplishment of the missions of the Central Intelligence Agency.

5. CONCLUSIONS:

- a. The present CIA Honor Awards Program would be enriched by the establishment of the decorations referred to in paragraph 4 above.
- b. Such awards should be made a matter of record and appropriate notice, and should be presented under circumstances suitable to the stature of the awards. Security considerations will determine the extent of publication.

6. RECOMMENDATIONS:

- a. That, utilizing the authority of Public Law 600, the CIA decorations proposed in paragraph 4 above (CIA Medal for Valor, CIA Exceptional Service Medal and CIA Meritorious Service Medal) be authorized by the Director of Central Intelligence.
- b. That the CIA Honor Awards Board prepare recommendations for submission to the Director of Central Intelligence regarding the newly proposed National Security Cross referred to in paragraph 4 above.
- c. That the CIA Honor Awards Board be made responsible for recommending designs, for establishing standards, for reviewing recommendations, and for transmitting to the Director a report of Board action in respect to each recommendation submitted for one of the decorations described above.
- d. That Agency Regulation [REDACTED] be accordingly amended.
